Parish News

We find ourselves in these days quickly approaching the end of the Church's liturgical year. Next Sunday we'll celebrate the feast of Christ the King, and then the new Church year begins the following Sunday with the First Sunday of Advent. And so, as we close out the year, it's very fitting that we hear in our Gospel reading this Sunday the Lord's words about the end of time. He says very directly, "Heaven and earth will pass away, but my words will not pass away." These words are sobering, but they shouldn't be cause for fear or anxiety. Instead, they should challenge us to take an honest look at our priorities and values and choices. When we're told that this world is passing away, the question should arise: "Well, how much of my time and energy and resources are being invested in those things that pass away, rather than in the things that endure for eternity?" Let's pray that these days that call to mind the coming of Christ may help to shake us out of our complacency with the ways of the world, so that we may live more and more as citizens of His Kingdom without end.
